Walter,

These two papers were received by me, and I thought they might interest you. I have read the shorter of the two, but found the technical language in the second too difficult. Somewhere in my brain it occurs to me that I would find Robert Hayes to be a good and worthwhile person - so I regret not reading his thesis.

Who is Chletia Wass and why is she writing to me?

The moon is full on the Prairie tonight and the air will be heavy with moist heat. Men will stand shirtless by pickup truck while the evening dust begins to mix again with their bodies' sweat. Women will wear cotton dresses with their hair pulled back and the rhythm of their hearts beats only for this strange satellite hanging over head. Most of all of this will be missed... most of us will remain safely locked in our houses.

Nothing of this language gives me the power to describe it.

I hope all is well

I think of the Capros often!
